

Coordinating Senior Care

by Iyad G. Houshan, M.D.

A full orchestra composed of the best musicians on one stage. Imagine that picture; you would think that you will hear a great piece of music. Well, this orchestra is missing a key person — the “maestro.” Therefore, if the best musicians could not play music without a “maestro,” how can a group of highly qualified physicians take care of their patients? That group of physicians also needs a “maestro.”

CareMore has it figured out. It has constructed a model of care that functions as a “maestro,” coordinating all aspects of health care for seniors. During my many years in academic medicine, I have been looking for the “maestro” and now CareMore, the “maestro,” is available in Las Vegas.

CareMore provides focused and innovative health care approaches to the complex problems of aging. CareMore’s pro-patient philosophy and full spectrum of care fosters well-being and promotes senior independence. The keys to success include the integration and coordination of care, the management of complex conditions and the availability of resources to adequately intervene in health care, when needed.

This integrated approach to care is the foundation of CareMore’s clinical model. While CareMore treats those with chronic illnesses, it also recognizes that even the nonfrail senior population requires close monitoring to proactively identify at-risk members and to provide aggressive management and treatment of chronic conditions, ultimately prolonging the onset of frailty.

CareMore’s focus is on quality, not quantity. By providing high-quality, high-touch care to our seniors, CareMore plans to make a big dent in health care in Las Vegas. Staff is dedicated to change its health care one patient at a time. They see patients in all aspects of their medical care, in the hospital and at the care centers. We understand that health care is a big part of seniors’ lives and CareMore’s intent is to make that part of their lives less stressful with more positive experiences.

CareMore operates several Care Centers throughout its service areas. CareMore’s Care Centers redefine the way senior health care is delivered, offering personalized health planning to all members. The CareMore Care Centers are located at 3085

E. Flamingo Road and 2601 N. Tenaya Way. The Care Center offers personalized health planning that ensures all members receive the individualized attention they deserve.

For more information about CareMore, call 1 877-211-6614.

Iyad G. Houshan, M.D., is an assistant professor of medicine and chief of the hospital medicine division at the University of Nevada School of Medicine in Las Vegas.